Competition for top Soldier, NCO set to heat up

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Fort Jackson's elite warriors will go head-to-head next week in a competition to determine the 2008 Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Year.

The three-day event, which begins Monday, will test the four previous Fort Jackson NCOs and Soldiers of the quarters from each training brigade and Initial Entry Training units assigned or attached to the post.

"It helps us identify the best noncommissioned officers and Soldiers on the installation through a series of professionally conducted events measuring physical fitness, tactical and professional knowledge," said Command Sgt. Maj. Brian Carlson, post command sergeant major. "But it also elevates their capabilities by preparing for such an event."

This year's event will consist of an Army Physical Fitness Test, rifle qualification, land navigation, warrior tasks, a 50-question written exam and a board appearance. Warrior tasks include deploying a Claymore Mine, performing an IV saline lock, maintaining an M-16, issuing a warning order and putting on NBC gear.

The 165th Infantry Brigade will host the event and is responsible for the planning, coordination, briefing and execution.

"The competition really boosts morale and sets the NCOs and Soldiers up for success," said event organizer 1st Sgt. Frederick Jackson, 1st Battalion, 34th Inf. Reg. first sergeant. "It is a great way for them to master their common skills."

The event will begin with the APFT and will be followed with rifle qualifications on Range 10. On Tuesday, participants will be tested on their warrior tasks and conduct day and night land navigation. A board appearance Wednesday in front of the post command sergeants major will cap off the competition.

An awards ceremony will be held at the conclusion of testing events to recognize winners. Winners will proceed to represent Fort Jackson in the 2008 U.S. Army Accessions Command NCO/SOY competition.

In 2007, NCO of the Year was Sgt. Johnny Rodriguez, 193rd Inf. Bde.; Soldier of the Year was Staff Sgt. Brian Winters, 120th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception). Winters, as a specialist, moved on to become the U.S. Army Accessions Command Soldier of the Year and was the runner-up in the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command Soldier of the Year competition.

Competing assignments; summer vacation

Col. Dixon

Q I have been selected to attend Officer Candidate School. I am also on assignment to Kuwait as an enlisted Soldier. Do I have any options?

A Yes, you may submit a DA Form 4187 through your brigade S1 requesting to be deleted from the assignment to Kuwait.

In accordance with MILPER Message 07-210, Soldiers who are selected to attend OCS are not deployable. However, there are certain assignments that are priority one. Human Resources Command is the final approving authority.

Q I'm in the process of making plans for my children's summer vacation and would like to know more about what is being offered at Fort Jackson. My children will be on vacation for 11 weeks and I need care for my fourth and fifth graders. Where can I find information about what is being offered, eligibility and when summer-camp registration begins?

A School Age Services offers Camp Vision Quest (Making a Difference) located at the Youth Center, 5975 Chesnut Road. Sign-up began April 1.

Children attending camp must first be registered with Child and Youth Services. Registration is handled at the Central Enrollment Office located in the Joe E Mann Community Center, 3392 Magruder Ave. Appointments for registration are available to reduce waiting times (walk-ins are taken on a space-available basis). To make an appointment, call 751-4865.

Vision Quest hours of operation are weekdays from 4:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Vision Quest is designed for youth who have completed first through fifth grades.

Family members of active duty and retired military personnel, Reserve and National Guard on active duty, civilian employees and employees of Department of Defense contractors are eligible to use the camp.

Proclamation for Child Abuse Prevention Month – April 2008

We are an Army at war, and we recognize that both our Soldiers and our Families make sacrifices every day. With deployment being a significant reality of Army life, it is imperative that our Soldiers understand that their spouses and children have our support.

The reality is that deployments are long, unpredictable, and dangerous. This puts significant stresses on Soldiers, spouses, and children. The Army has built powerful responses to these challenges, but it is not enough to just say "we have the services you need."

We now know from research published in the Journal of American Medical Association that some Army children touched by parental deployment to Iraq and Afghanistan are at greater risk for child neglect. The research confirms that the tremendous stresses (parenting alone, anxiety for the parent in harm's way) experienced by Families contribute to the problems associated with higher increases of injury and abuse.

Now, more than ever, we have to demonstrate our commitment to provide our children, their parents, and caregivers with a strong supportive environment where children can be safe and thrive. The quality of life for our Families must match the quality of their Soldiers' service.

As Commander of this installation, I ask that we all rededicate ourselves to protecting all children here at Fort Jackson. I charge everyone in the Fort Jackson community, inside and outside the gate, to get involved in supporting child abuse prevention.

Therefore, our Child Abuse Prevention Month Campaign for 2008 must reinforce the promises of the Army Family Covenant. Just as we give full support to the force, we must give full support to our Families.

We are Army Strong. Now, in Child Abuse Prevention Month 2008, we need to show that we are Army and Community Strong in Keeping Children and Families Safe.

DES studies high-traffic accident areas on post

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

A trip to the commissary or post exchange might put more than just a dent in your wallet; it could put a dent in your vehicle as well. According to a study done by the Directorate of Emergency Services, these are the mostly likely places on post to get into a traffic accident.

There were 248 traffic accidents on Fort Jackson in 2007. Thirteen (5.6 percent) of them were either at the PX or commissary.

“Studies like these should be a standard law enforcement practice to see if there are specific trends,” said. Lt. Col. Greg Vibber, director, DES. “That way proactive steps can be taken to help eliminate as many accidents as possible.”

After breaking down all the accidents by location and time, the results didn’t come as a shock to DES traffic accident investigator Sgt. Danny Cox.

“Not surprising, you are going to have the most accidents in high traffic areas,” Cox said.

In addition to the PX and commissary, other high traffic accident areas include Jackson Boulevard, Magruder Avenue and Strom Thurmond Boulevard.

The biggest cause of vehicle accidents, one out of every four, was improper backing. Speeding, failure to yield the right of way and failure to judge proper clearance were also high on the list of causes for accidents.

After identifying the major accident spots and causes, recommendations were made to alleviate the problems.

“One option is to increase the angle of parking spaces,” Cox said. “If you are backing out perpendicular you are more likely to run into something as opposed to backing out at a 30-degree angle. Another option is to widen parking spaces to give drivers more clear room around their vehicle which would allow them to see better.”

Vibber added the DES will be working with the Directorate of Public Works to add or change traffic signs alerting drivers to high traffic areas.

“We want to instill in drivers not to just go on autopilot; recheck your driving habits,” he said.

Cox echoed Vibber’s sentiment of drivers needing to pay more attention.

“Accidents tend to happen when you are in a hurry and try to rush things,” Cox said. “If you pull out in front of someone and they are speeding, it can go down hill real quick.”

Other proactive steps Vibber said can help cut down on accidents include more patrols in high traffic areas and getting unit commanders involved.

“If we find one unit where the Soldiers are getting into more traffic accidents than their peers, we want to get with the chain of command to make them aware of the problem and see what we can do to change driving habits,” he said. “We want to make Fort Jackson a safer place to drive and a safe place for pedestrians as well.”

Convoy Live Fire mounted course opens at month’s end

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Conducting convoy operations is a critical skill for Soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan. So much so, a new live fire course is being introduced at Fort Jackson to better replicate the types of situations they will face once they are deployed.

Camden Convoy Live Fire, which is slated to open for training April 21, is a 4.3-mile mounted combat course featuring remote-controlled pop-up targets. The course will replace Anzio Range, which has been used in the past to train Basic Combat Training Soldiers.

“This new course is designed to provide enhanced opportunity to train those specific individual and basic collective skills required to be successful in theater,” Schwitters said. “It is a considerable expansion and improvement of the training at Anzio. The added realism and increased opportunities to shoot will better prepare Soldiers for what they will encounter when they deploy.”

Company B, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment is the first company scheduled to use the course.

“We have a few things to do here and there, but we are ready to open,” said Mark Smagner, Range Control chief of operations. “This should be a very interesting range. Everyone is pumped up about it.”

The new course, which has the capacity to train up to company-sized platoons simultaneously, features an After Action Review Site, a staging area with ammo points and water pods where the convoys will start and finish.

The site is located along Fire Break 39 between Johnson Rifle and Dixie roads. The area has the capacity to

Phishing e-mail to MWR patrons turns out to be Army exercise

William Bradner

Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command

More than 10,000 Soldiers, civilians and Family members with military e-mail addresses received an e-mail March 30 promising free tickets to area theme parks, with a link to a Web site that appeared to belong to the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

These e-mails were sent without the knowledge or consent of the FMWRC or installation MWR offices.

These e-mails were "phishing" e-mails developed by the Army Computer Emergency Response Team in a Global Computer Network Defense exercise, Bulwark Defender 08 (BD08) to test the defensive posture of the Army LandWarNet.

FMWRC officials were not alerted to the exercise in advance because the unit "limits the number of trusted agents" in phishing exercises of this type, according to ACERT officials.

FMWRC reacted decisively by informing its patrons that the offer was not legitimate, distributing a press release to media outlets worldwide in an effort to warn as many customers as possible, and coordinating through Army legal and information technology offices to have the bogus Web site shut down.

When ACERT officials finally confirmed late Monday the e-mail and Web site were part of their exercise, FMWRC began coordinating with ACERT to prepare messages and media responses addressing the phishing scam, and more importantly, the breach of trust it represents to MWR customers.

"From the outside, looking in, the customer has no way of knowing FMWRC was not involved in this exercise," said Laurie Pugh, Public Affairs officer for FMWRC. "We have no idea how many of our customers this exercise has alienated."

FMWRC routinely sends e-mail messages to its customers and press releases to installation newspapers, inviting patrons to visit the official Web site to learn about new offers and promotions.

"The Family and MWR Command has spent decades and millions of dollars establishing our brand as one that can be recognized and trusted by Soldiers and families," Pugh said. "We have yet to determine how much of that trust has been undermined by this exercise."

The e-mail and Web site created by ACERT were convincing enough to entice more than 3,000 people to click through, in part because of the use of the MWR Web graphics and logo, and in part because patrons are used to receiving similar messages.

"It's important to be alert to potential phishing attempts," Pugh said. "But it's also important for FMWRC to be able to use e-mail and our Web site as an effective marketing tool."

All legitimate e-mails from FMWRC will come from a ".mil" address, and links will direct patrons to www.armymwr.com.

When in doubt, do not click through the e-mail. Type www.ArmyMWR.com directly into a Web browser and see if the offer is advertised on FMWRC's official Web site.

ACERT officials sent a follow-up e-mail to the original 10,000 recipients of the "phishing" e-mail describing the exercise and asserting the e-mail was non-malicious.

Their second e-mail reads, in part:

"For those individuals responding to the ACERT phishing attempts regardless of what you submitted, no personal data was collected or transmitted."

This exercise illustrates how hackers can turn the popularity of a trusted resource such as the MWR Web site against unwitting personnel by using real information and activities openly available on the Internet.

We apologize for any inconvenience or false hope these e-mails may have caused. As users of Army network and information systems, you play an integral role in the Information Assurance and Network Security posture for the Army. As you know, phishing e-mails are a common method used by hackers to infiltrate Army networks and systems.

Your ability to identify and respond to phishing attempts is paramount to the defense of critical information systems that make up the Army LandWarNet.

Soon, you will receive another e-mail from the ACERT that will provide education on how to identify "phishing" attempts as illegitimate.

We appreciate your participation in this exercise. Everyone plays a part in the security of the Army networks and systems. It is important for everyone to know the MWR brand can be trusted, so please forward this e-mail to anyone you may have shared the original "phishing" e-mail with."

Anyone with questions or comments in the conduct of the exercise should contact the ACERT at 703-706-1113.

Customer Service Corner

TRICARE payments a top concern

Christina Garza

Community FIRST Coordinator

The 2008 Army Family Action Plan Conference was held April 1 at Fort Jackson and included 36 delegates, 30 subject matter experts and 10 AFAP support staff.

Delegates represented the following constituent groups: Soldiers (active, Army National Guard and Reserves, including drill sergeants), retirees, veterans, civilian employees and family members. Two groups, consisting of 18 delegates each, discussed issues, which affect the well being of the Fort Jackson community, ending with 14 issues being developed. Following are four of the issues developed.

Issue: Improve goods and services for Fort Jackson Soldiers and family members.

Scope: The products offered on post are not competitive with the outside market in regards to selection and prices. Gas prices and products in the post exchange are equal to or more than off post, and the selection is limited. When the post does not provide the selection and costs, Soldiers and family members end up going elsewhere.

Recommendation:

- Reduce prices (i.e., gas and PX items) on the installation.
- Provide better product selection (alternative movie viewing and more products in the PX).
- Extend shopping hours at all facilities.

Issue: Civilian employee attendance at post functions.

Scope: Some civilian employees are unable to attend post functions without using leave. Some organizations allow 30 minute lunches, but events are typically 1.5 hours long. As a result, civilian employees are unable to support these functions.

Recommendation:

- Implement and publish a civilian employee policy pertaining to attendance at post functions.
- Request the senior leaders to encourage employee participation at installation functions.

Issue: TRICARE authorization/reimbursement for urgent care.

Scope: Authorization and payments for urgent care received are not being paid to the civilian medical facilities. Urgent care visits to civilian medical facilities are not being paid because of discrepancies in urgent care versus emergent care. Services not paid result in stress and financial burden upon Soldiers and their families.

Recommendation:

- Clarify and educate the civilian medical facilities on urgent care versus emergent care.
- Update billing codes to reflect the type of care in the civilian sector.

Issue: Inadequate processing time for Veterans Affairs disability rating claims.

Scope: The processing time for VA disability rating claims is too long. It is not uncommon for processing times to exceed seven months. The delay in processing results in diminished employment opportunities, compensation, entitlements and VA treatment.

Recommendation:

- Speed up the processing time for VA disability ratings.
- Provide a Veterans Integrated Services Network VA representative at the ACAP briefing.
- Educate the veteran on the process for tracking the disability rating claim.

Each issue will be published in the Fort Jackson Leader and on the Fort Jackson Customer Management Services Web site once action has either been completed, deemed unattainable or forwarded beyond Fort Jackson.

Submitted issues can be viewed or new issues submitted through the Customer Management Services Web site. April is issue submission month for third quarter FY 2008. Submit issues whether it affects Fort Jackson or the entire Army; feedback is important.

Help the community by submitting issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>. Click on "Submit an Issue or Recommendation" or click on the AFAP Logo to submit an issue. Look for more issues from the AFAP Conference in next week's article.

DoD to phase out full SSN on ID cards

Gerry J. Gilmore

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — As a means of combating identity theft, the Defense Department will issue identification cards without full Social Security numbers on them, a senior official said recently.

The Defense Department cares about protecting personal information as well as increasing database security, Mary Dixon, director of the Defense Manpower Data Center based in Arlington, Va., told Pentagon Channel and American Forces Press Service reporters.

Identity theft is a very real problem today, Dixon explained. Criminals who pilfer SSN-bearing identity cards can virtually assume someone's identity through a few computer keystrokes and clicks of a mouse, she said.

TriCare, the military services' health maintenance organization, already has removed Social Security numbers from its members' identification cards, Dixon said.

Plans are to remove the Social Security numbers from identification cards issued to military family members by the end of this year, Dixon said, noting that those cards still would display the sponsors' number, for now.

Between 2009 and 2010, all department-issued identification cards will feature only the last four digits of a holder's Social Security number, she said.

About 3.4 million people now have department-issued Common Access Cards, Dixon said. Around two-thirds of those card holders are military members, and some civilians who deploy overseas, who have full Social Security numbers printed onto the back of their CACs.

"You might lose that card," Dixon pointed out, noting that family members, including children, could misplace their identification cards, too.

Modern information technology precludes the need to have full Social Security numbers printed onto employee and family member ID cards, Dixon said.

"Today, all of our (computer) systems can 'talk' to each other, so we don't necessarily need to know all of that information printed on your card," she said.

New identification cards will be issued as they reach their expiration dates, Dixon said.

VA recognizes women veterans' sacrifices

Department of Veterans Affairs

WASHINGTON — Recognizing the valor, service and sacrifice of America's 1.7 million women veterans, the Department of Veterans Affairs has created a comprehensive array of benefits and programs.

"Women who served this country in uniform — whether veterans of World War II, Korea, Vietnam, the Gulf War, the current Global War on Terror or peacetime service — have earned our respect and thanks," said Dr. James B. Peake, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. "They have also earned the full range of VA programs offered by a grateful nation."

Peake also announced the Fourth National Summit on Women Veterans Issues to be held June 20-22 in Washington D.C. The Summit will offer attendees an opportunity to enhance future progress on women veterans issues, with sessions specifically for the Reserve and National Guard, information on military sexual trauma and readjustment issues, after the military veteran resources and many more programs and exhibits.

Women veterans are entitled to the same benefits and medical care as their male counterparts, including health care, disability compensation, education assistance, work-study allowance, vocational rehabilitation, employment and counseling services, insurance, home loan benefits, nursing home care, survivor benefits and various burial benefits.

VA also has a multitude of services and programs to respond to the unique needs of women veterans. VA offers comprehensive, high-quality primary health care services for women, including Pap smears, mammography and general reproductive health care.

Along with these services, VA's mental health care for women includes substance abuse counseling, evaluation and treatment of military sexual trauma and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder.

VA has several specific initiatives for 2008 including:

- enhancing skills of primary care providers who treat women veterans;
- examining other women's health issues, including cardiac care, breast cancer, and colorectal cancer in women;
- focusing on family issues and avoiding birth defects through enhanced pharmacy practices for women veterans of child bearing age.

Women veterans are the fastest growing segment of the veteran population second only to elderly veterans. Approximately 1.7 million women veterans comprise 7 percent of the total veteran population. Approximately 255,000 women use VA health care services. Today, more than 200,000 women are serving in the Armed Forces. With the increasing number of women, VA estimates by 2020 women veterans will comprise 10 percent of the veteran population.

There is a women veterans program manager at every VA medical center, a women's liaison at every community based outpatient clinic and a women veterans coordinator at every VA regional office.

VA is reaching out to women veterans who are experiencing problems related to sexual trauma or harassment while in the military.

All veterans, men and women, may receive free counseling, disability compensation, and related services for sexual trauma incurred in the military. In addition, there are programs for women veterans who are homeless or are victims of domestic violence.

There is a Military Sexual Trauma point of contact for psychotherapy at every VA medical center. Extensive enhancements of the MST program have taken place over the past two years, including training of providers in the most current effective treatments for PTSD and sexual trauma. In addition, VA has sites for combat PTSD in women and is examining how best to address complex combat and MST issues.

In addition to the services provided at each VA medical center, the Department also operates 50 Women's Health Centers, within medical centers, that serve as specific locations for women veterans to receive care. These centers develop new and enhanced programs for women; some also conduct research on medical and psychosocial issues.

Peake recently visited the largest women's center in the VA, located at the James A. Haley VA Medical Center in Tampa, Fla. With more than 20,000 women veterans enrolled for care, the center is able to provide a variety of women specific services in one location.

Through its Center for Women Veterans and the Secretary's Advisory Committee on Women Veterans, VA is continually looking into new and innovative ways to provide improved benefits and services to women veterans.

More information on the Fourth National Summit on Women Veterans Issues can be found at www.va.gov/women/vet. For more information about VA benefits and services, veterans may contact their local VA regional office, medical center, or vet center. For questions concerning VA benefits, call (800) 827-1000, for questions concerning VA health care, call (877) 222-8387 or go visit <http://www.va.gov>.

Leader Staff

Staff Sgt. Brian Winters joined the Army at an age when many Soldiers are already seasoned veterans, possibly even with an eye toward retirement in the not too-distant future.

Winters, however, has been able to use his age to his advantage and is moving quickly through the ranks.

Winters, 37, joined the Army five years ago when the family business where he worked was sold. He decided to become a chaplain assistant.

"I have a ministry degree. So I figured it would probably be more in my lane, I'm more in my comfort zone," the father of two said. "It's been a great choice. I love the job."

His military career includes two deployments to Iraq in support of the Global War on Terror and a tour of duty in Germany.

He has been assigned to the 120th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) for almost two years — and has many achievements on his record. Last year, as a specialist, Winters was named Fort Jackson's Soldier of the Year.

He moved on to become the U.S. Army Accessions Command Soldier of the Year and was the runner-up in the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command Soldier of the Year competition.

The recognition has boosted Winters' confidence.

"Coming into the Army at a later age, you know you have some issues: 'Am I physically able to do a lot of the stuff?'" he asked. "And (becoming Soldier of the Year) underscores the fact that, yes, I am. I'm not quite over the hill yet and still have a little fight left in me."

Winters also pointed out that there are positive factors to his age.

"You have a maturity and a grasp of life that you don't have at 20. Life is a little more serious, not boring, but a little more serious at that time," he explained. "The biggest advantage my age gave me was experience and insight just to make right decisions and think things through."

Chaplain (Capt.) Charles Barna, 120th AG Bn., agrees that Winters' maturity played a role in his success.

"He came into the Army an older individual, an individual who had done a lot with his life prior to coming in. And I think that was one of the things that first set him up for success," Barna said.

Winters' maturity is not the only factor contributing to his achievements, though.

"I am stubbornly driven to get things done," he revealed. "If I set out to do something and I want something and I can conceive that it's doable, then I just keep hammering at it. If someone says no, well, then I'll go ask somebody else; and if they shut the door, then I'll go ask somebody else."

That persistence also played a role in accomplishing Winters' next career move. Once again, his age could not hold him back and he was accepted to attend Officer Candidate School — despite the school's standard practice of not accepting candidates older than 29.

"When I first came in, I was told immediately — right off the bat — that I was too old. And I kind of accepted that," Winters said. "(Then) I found out there's such a thing as a waiver, but they're not giving any waivers," he continued. "When I came to Fort Jackson and I sat down for my initial interview with my company commander, he asked me, 'Why aren't you going to OCS, you have a degree?' And I said, 'I'm too old.' And he said, 'No, you're not. I can get you a waiver.' And I began my quest at that time."

That quest will lead him to Fort Benning, Ga., where he is scheduled to attend OCS in June to become an Air Defense Artillery officer.

"It's a big stretch (from being a chaplain assistant)," he said. It'll be fun to see how I do that."

Judging by his track record, the sky is the limit.

hold 14 convoy vehicles.

Seven convoy vehicles at a time would proceed onto the course, which would include a lead command High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle (HMMWV), four gun trucks, an ambulance and a follow HMMWV equipped with a Squad Automatic Weapon (SAW).

The course goes down the firebreak, jogs along another firebreak until meeting Dixie Road near Remagen Hand Grenade Range.

The convoy would then travel down Dixie Road, turn south down another firebreak before entering the live-fire portion of the course between the Forward Aid Station and Omaha Beach Range.

The live-fire portion of the course is 2.1 miles and includes six infantry and tank target areas spread across its length. Targets are remote controlled and pop up as the convoys pass.

Troops will traverse the course three times — a dry run, a blank run and a live-fire run. It is expected to take about 30 minutes to complete during the live-fire run.

The project, which was approved in 2005 by then Fort Jackson Commanding General Brig. Gen. Abraham Turner, follows a convoy operation design created by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Funding for the new course, however, was deferred until 2007 because of Base Realignment and Closure priorities.

Anzio Range Convoy Live Fire will remain open for the Drill Sergeant School and Advanced Individual Training Soldiers.

Hearts Apart supports military families

Patricia Guillory
Army Community Services

Hearts Apart is a support network sponsored by the Fort Jackson Army Community Service. This support group has been established for military families who are waiting for their service member to return from an unaccompanied tour. The Hearts Apart family support network links military family members with other families who are left behind because of the sponsor's mission requirements.

Army Community Service provides military families a supportive group setting for activities, opportunities to learn about available resources (on and off post) and the ability to network with other military families who are living in the area without their military sponsor.

The ongoing contact of a supportive group or a friendly gathering seems to offer the greatest comfort to those separated from their loved ones.

The Hearts Apart Waiting Support group offers families an opportunity to connect with old and new friends, and provides information and quality support to waiting family members of military and Department of Defense civilian personnel.

Military commanders realize that family well-being can affect a Soldier's ability to focus on his or her mission. The Hearts Apart support group helps to ensure that the family is supported while the Soldier is away. Through informal programs, Hearts Apart can provide supportive fellowship, education, referral and assistance.

Hearts Apart encourages families to maintain contact with their command and unit family group. Families who live either too far from the unit or from other military families can stay connected through the resources available on-line and in their community.

How does Hearts Apart work?

Hearts Apart is designed to help family members make prolonged separations more bearable. Whenever a Soldier is leaving on a deployment or an unaccompanied tour of duty, ACS staff works with commanders to obtain accurate contact information for the family.

Once the family is identified, ACS makes every effort to reach the family to assess the need for services and information; provide answers to questions with ongoing information updates; and act as liaison with military and civilian organizations.

ACS invites spouses to participate in Hearts Apart support meetings to share activities such as monthly birthday celebrations; holiday events; arts and crafts activities such as scrapbooking; Powder Puff Mechanics, self-defense and much more.

Hearts Apart activities will differ to meet the needs and special interest of the individuals involved.

For example, groups which include members who have small children may tend to be child focused with emphasis on playgroups. Groups with members who have older children might focus on sports events and fishing.

How is Hearts Apart structured?

Hearts Apart is not formally structured; instead, family members are invited to meetings and events focused on sharing ideas about things to do.

It is designed to be a fun-filled, relaxing and informative time to meet with other spouses and families in similar situations. The group usually meets monthly for activities such as bowling, skating, pizza and movie nights, book clubs, card games, parties for children or making arts and crafts or special holiday gifts for the absent family member.

Army Community Service at Fort Jackson invites family members to join the local Hearts Apart support group.

For more information on this group or to join, call 751-7489 or e-mail Patricia.Guillory@jackson.army.mil.

Nursing students explore Army for a weekend

Maj. Jack Holdford

Moncrief Army Community Hospital

What is it like to be an Army nurse? How are Army nurses different from civilian nurses? These questions were explored by 10 non-ROTC nursing students from Clemson and South Carolina State universities as they recently attended the inaugural “Be an Army Nurse Weekend” at Fort Jackson’s Moncrief Army Community Hospital.

The college students postponed their spring break to spend time with Army nurses and to explore the opportunities, too.

The weekend program included “Army nurse training.” The nursing students shadowed Army nurses in clinical areas, spent one-on-one time with Army nurses, ate in the dining facilities with Army nurses and learned that Army nursing is very similar to civilian nursing.

According to one student, “It seems like Army nurses just see so much more in a shorter amount of time; I mean, other than that, they are still nurses.”

In addition to having clinical experiences, the nursing students saw other dimensions of Army nursing by watching the documentary, “Baghdad ER,” attending a presentation on a humanitarian mission to post-earthquake Pakistan and spending a few hours at the Team Development Course.

Maj. Gen. Gale Pollock, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, said she believes that every nurse is a recruiter. Programs like Moncrief Army Community Hospital’s “Be an Army nurse Weekend” give future nurses a taste of Army Nursing and allow them to see the opportunities available to today’s Army nurse.

Occupational therapy open house set

American Occupational Therapy Association

The Occupational Therapy Department at Moncrief Army Community Hospital will be hosting an Open House today from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the hospital’s 11th floor. Everyone is invited to attend and learn about services on Fort Jackson.

For millions of people, the service of occupational therapy is a lifeline. People of all ages receive it to help them participate in the activities of their daily life.

Sometimes people need occupational therapy to do things others take for granted, like getting dressed, being productive at school or work, eating without assistance or socializing.

Occupational therapy does not just treat medical conditions, it helps people stay engaged in the activities that give them pleasure or a sense of purpose, despite challenges.

Occupational therapists do this by helping people surmount their disabilities or medical conditions to do everyday activities.

The nature of the therapy depends on the patient and his or her environment; occupational therapists consider the whole person when developing a therapy plan. Occupational therapists collaborate with physicians and other professionals to ensure a comprehensive approach.

Children, for instance, sometimes have behavioral or developmental problems, which limit their educational progress. Lawmakers believe occupational therapy is so important to the well-being of children, federal law mandates that schools must offer occupational therapy to children who need it.

Occupational therapy is “outcome-oriented,” which means therapists help clients work toward achievable performance goals.

In rehabilitation clinics or hospitals, occupational therapists and occupational therapy assistants help adults learn or regain skills that allow them to do meaningful things like working, driving, shopping and preparing a meal. All types of people need this kind of help every day, from a worker injured on the job to a grandparent recovering from surgery or a stroke.

Occupational therapy helps avoid health problems and makes it easier to live with them.

Occupational therapy research proves that keeping people active and healthy as they age will improve their quality of life as well as lower their health care costs.

That is why there are occupational therapy programs focusing on wellness and prevention — to help seniors stay healthier and remain active in their homes and communities.

Trained therapists can make homes safer for people with reduced mobility and failing vision. Occupational therapists can also teach seniors new driving techniques that will keep them behind the wheel longer, as safe drivers.

Occupational therapy addresses one of the most important aspects of rehabilitation and recovery — the return to a normal life.

Occupational therapy has its roots, a century ago, in helping war veterans return to life at home. These days, occupational therapists work in rehabilitation hospitals and on the front lines of combat.

Some occupational therapy programs help Soldiers recognize and relieve stress. In addition, occupational therapy helps Soldiers learn to care for themselves after an injury, including helping them use artificial limbs.

In recognition of all the ways occupational therapy contributes to society’s well-being, April has been designated as Occupational Therapy Month.

To find out more about occupational therapy and how it might help you, visit the American Occupational Therapy Association’s Web site, www.aota.org.

Remain in God’s presence

Chaplain (Capt.) Josh Gilliam
187th Ordnance Battalion

I want to describe a way of interacting with God through the Bible that might not be a common practice for many. I call this devotional practice “Prayer-Reading.”

“Prayer-Reading” attempts to combine these disciplines with an emphasis on interacting with the Holy Spirit and remaining in God’s presence.

Through “Prayer-Reading” we are seeking supernatural revelation that will pass through our mind and into our heart, where we may communicate with God. The purpose is not to acquire information about God, but to experience him.

To explain this more concretely, I will describe a potential format.

First, take several minutes to quiet your mind and ask the Lord to speak to you. Ask for his presence. In the same way that Christ’s actual presence dwelt in the Old Testament temple, his actual presence now lives in you.

Next, begin slowly reading where you stopped reading the time before. If you come across a word or a concept you do not understand, jot it down so that you can pursue it during your study time. If it reminds you of an e-mail you need to send, jot that down on your to-do list to free your mind from thinking about it.

If you come to a verse that contains a truth you should believe, like “The kingdom of God is within you.” (Luke 17:22), pause and slowly interact with the Lord concerning it with statements such as: “I believe your kingdom is within me,” or “Please help me to believe your kingdom dwells in my heart.”

If you feel the Holy Spirit speaking about this concept, allow yourself to quietly remain in the place of meditation and listening.

If you come to a verse that exhorts you to obey, like “Do not commit adultery.” (Exodus 20:14), make a resolution in your heart to say yes to God in this matter.

Then ask him for help.

Cases of the Week

A Soldier was charged with drunken and disorderly conduct and destruction of government property. Responding to a call about a drunken and disorderly Soldier, Military Police arrived at the scene and said they found a male Soldier who appeared to be intoxicated in the women’s latrine. According to reports, the Soldier became upset after being asked to leave and tore a water fountain from the wall cutting his finger in the process. MPs had to subdue the Soldier by force. The Soldier was transported to Moncrief Army Community Hospital and had to be restrained for treatment.

A blue and orange pocket bike scooter worth $250 was stolen from a backyard in the housing area. The scooter was unsecured and unattended.

A civilian was apprehended after trying to enter the installation in the trunk of a Soldier’s car. According to MPs, the civilian had forgotten his ID card. A criminal background check and post-bar check yielded no results. The Soldier was released to his unit.

Tip of the Week

The Directorate of Emergency Services asks all residents in the housing area to be vigilant. Anyone who sees a crime should report it.

The housing area is undergoing major renovation. That leaves a lot of quarters unoccupied and unattended, which creates the possibility for criminal damage to occur.

If you see anyone damaging equipment or structures, please report it to the MPs by calling, 751-3114/3115.

Let’s work together to keep our neighborhoods safe.

Using Hammer's lyrics to get 'too legit to quit'

COMMENTARY

Maj. Thomas L. Hundley
Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Let me take you back to the entertaining 1980s.

If I took a poll to see who the most dynamic entertainers of that decade were, I am sure that Michael Jackson and M.C. Hammer would appear on 90 percent of the ballots.

You know an entertainer has made a profound impact on society when Americans begin to dress like them. How many of you are willing to admit that you still have that red, leather zipper jacket or that one shiny glove? I actually know some of you who still wear those baggy Hammer pants with your Class A shoes.

I often wondered what would happen if Michael Jackson challenged M.C. Hammer to a dance contest. If they were only allowed to speak the lyrics from their songs, the conversation would go something like this:

Jackson: "You Wanna Be Startin' Something?"

Hammer: "Let's Get It Started."

Jackson: "You Know I'm Bad; I'm Bad; You Know It."

Hammer: "Yeah, but You Can't Touch This! You Can't Touch This!"

Jackson: "I'll make you say, You Rock My World."

Hammer: "I'll make you say, Please Hammer, Don't Hurt 'Em."

Jackson: "Keep On, Don't Stop Till You Get Enough!"

Hammer: "No problem, I'm Too Legit, Too Legit To Quit!"

And the winner is: M.C. Hammer. OK, I know you're wondering what in the world does this have to do with sports, fitness or nutrition. Or maybe you are saying to yourself, this guy is either crazy or has way too much time on his hands. But pump your brakes and let me explain the method to my madness.

I am willing to bet that everyone's fitness resolutions disappeared as soon as the

Maj. Thomas Hundley

Girl Scout cookies arrived. Now that the cold weather is gone, I'm willing to bet you tell your boss that you have an afternoon appointment so you can leave work earlier. (Don't act like I'm the only one who does that).

But right now, your only problem is that you lack motivation. You are not motivated to diet, and you are not motivated to exercise.

But I have the solution. I intend to use the lyrics of M.C. Hammer to provide some resuscitation to your motivation. Stop — Hammer Time.

Let's Get It Started

For the next 30 days, get your day started with a morning walk, run or jog. After your exercise session, get your diet started with a nutritious breakfast. My personal favorite is any flavor of Cheerios and a banana.

Pumps and a Bump

For the next 30 days, add a little resistance training into your life. Try lifting some light weights (consult a fitness trainer for advice) or use tension bands. Pumping iron helps to build muscle which also helps burn fat.

You Can't Touch This

For the next 30 days, "You Can't Touch" candy, cookies, cakes and a whole bunch of other stuff that start with the letter C. Let go of the fried foods and the junk foods. Just to show off my lyrical side: I know you love em' so much, but these are the foods, you can't touch.

Too Legit To Quit

It's natural to get tempted to cheat on your diet. It's natural to give up on living a healthy lifestyle. But let me remind you, South Carolina has legitimately hot summers. Also, being overweight poses a legitimate risk for strokes or heart attacks. Most importantly, your family, friends and co-workers legitimately care about your well being. The bottom line is; you, your life and your healthy lifestyle are all Too Legit To Quit!

Next time I will conjure up a battle where Michael Jackson wins. Shamon!
